

School of Management - Public services and third sector research theme

A one day symposium

Public Service Professions and Technology

THURSDAY 6th JUNE

10am - 5.30pm

All are welcome

- ❖ The work of public service professionals might be enhanced by new possibilities of communication and interaction offered by information and communication technologies. But, greater risks might also emerge.
- ❖ This event gathers different academic perspectives on the interplay and dynamics of professions via technologies. It will offer the opportunity to identify, discuss and reflect on issues that require attention from policy makers and professionals in the public and private sector.

Venue: School of Management, Royal Holloway campus

Format: Panel discussions with external speakers around particular themes

Organisers: Jose-Rodrigo Cordoba-Pachon, Mark Exworthy & Chris Smith

To register and for further details, email: M.Exworthy@rhul.ac.uk

Royal Holloway
University of London