AUDIOVISUAL CITATION

BUFVC GUIDELINES FOR REFERENCING MOVING IMAGE AND SOUND

Compiled by: Dr Richard Hewett & Dr Sian Barber
Published by: British Universities Film & Video Council, March 2013

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

These guidelines represent an attempt to address the growing need for a clear, comprehensive and consistent system for the citation of moving image and sound. Despite the increasing use of audiovisual material in teaching, learning and research in higher and further education, the basic criteria listed in existing referencing systems such as Harvard and Chicago do not fully address the wide range of types and formats that need formal citation, based as they are on standards developed for the written word.

In response to the 2011 HEFCE / Jisc report – Film and Sound in Higher and Further Education: A Progress Report with Ten Strategic Recommendations – the HEFCE-funded BUFVC Guidelines for Referencing Moving Image and Sound aims to establish an authoritative and accessible set of guidelines that is applicable to a wide range of different users across all disciplines. Covering film, television programmes, radio programmes, audio recordings, DVD extras, clips, trailers, adverts, idents, non-broadcast, amateur and archive material, podcasts, vodcasts and games, it also includes style guidance on citations in reference lists and in-text citation. By following these recommendations, references can be unambiguously traced back to a unique item at any time in the future.

The referencing guidelines that follow, while similar to familiar bibliographic styles used for books and journals, cater expressly for moving image and sound. They are not intended to be prescriptive, but instead aim to encourage best practice in citing any kind of audiovisual item. For more information on the background to the project, please visit bufvc.ac.uk/avcitation.

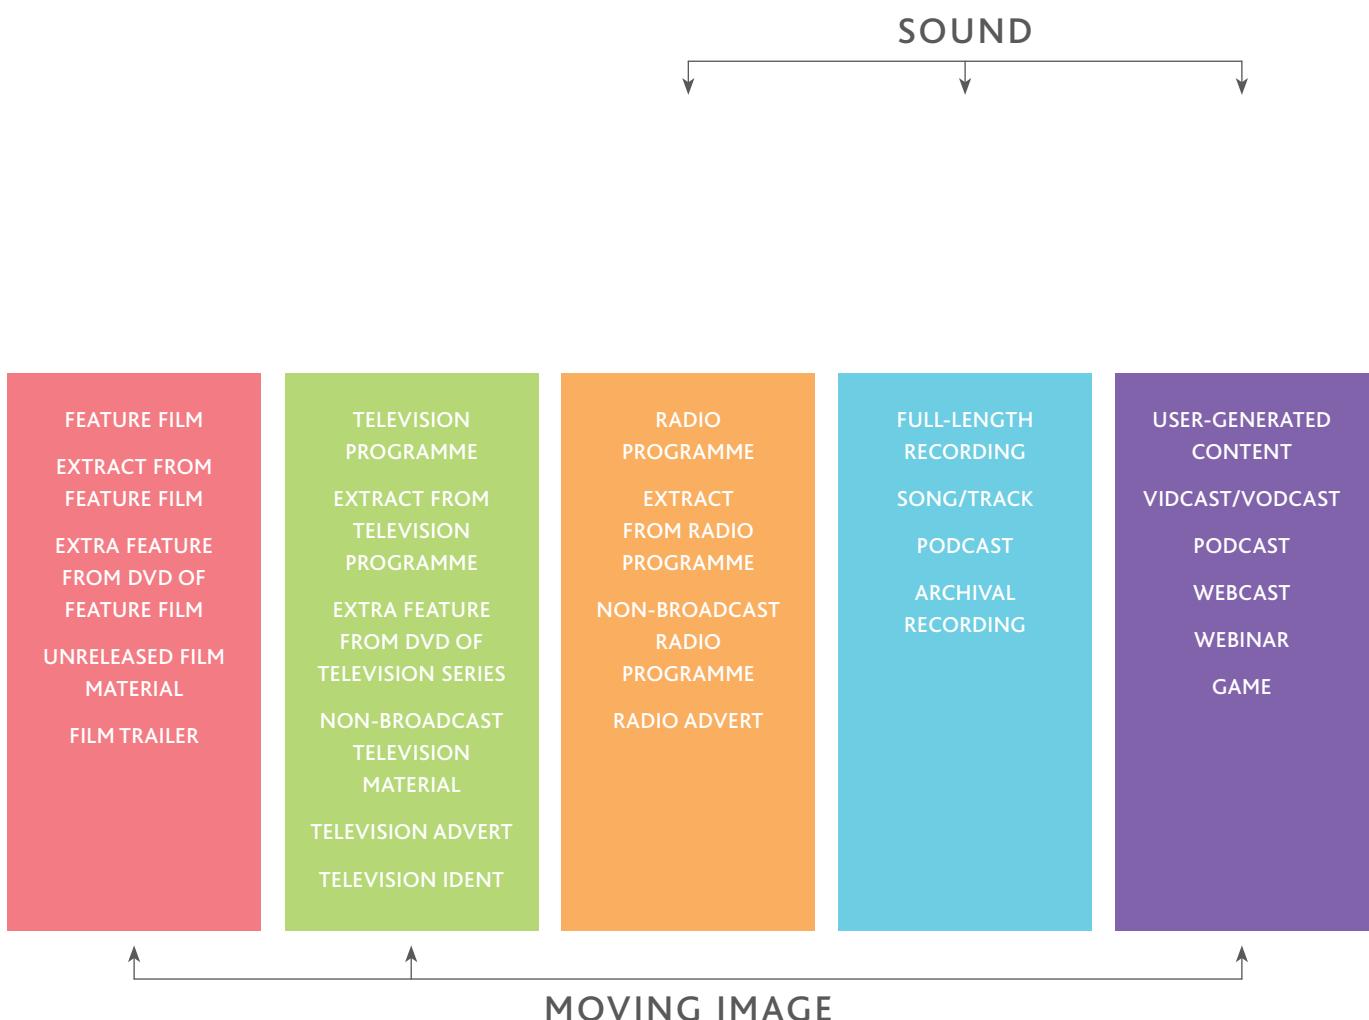

This is the first edition of the guidelines and it will be reviewed periodically. The BUFVC welcomes comments and feedback via avcitation@bufvc.ac.uk, or join the discussion by tweeting @bufvc.

"... there is not yet a uniform set of citation standards in education for quoting and referencing either moving images or recorded sound. For academics to gain greater confidence in the use of moving image and sound content in research and publication, they will require the standardisation of citation and the assurance that collections will hold material and sustain collections on the same basis as print material."

TYPES OF AUDIO VISUAL MATERIAL

Audiovisual items fall into two main categories: moving image and sound. These can be split into five sub-groups – Film, Television, Radio, Other Audio (e.g. non-radio recordings) and New Media (e.g. online, digital) – some of which can overlap. When deciding which category your item belongs to, you should first consider what type of medium it was originally created or intended for, rather than the format in which you have accessed it. For example, a film you have located online belongs in Film, whereas a user-generated mash-up that is only available on YouTube belongs in New Media. Look at the simple guide below to help you choose a category:

HOW TO REFERENCE

Detailed guidelines on what information to include when referencing film, television, radio, other audio and new media are provided on the following pages, along with specific examples. Efforts have been made to standardise the order of fields required, though there is a degree of variance depending on the type of medium, e.g. films have a year of release, while television programmes have a transmission date. The information you need to include for the material being referenced is listed in a specific order, e.g. title before production credit, production company before country of production, and so on. An example of this for referencing [redacted] is shown below:

[Given Title or 'Clip Title', Film Title [type, format] Production credit. Production Company/
Sponsor/Private, Country of production, year of release. Duration. Start-end timings of extract.
[release information, e.g. production company, catalogue number, date of specific edition] or point of access, e.g. archive collection, archive reference, or name of private collection, or original web URL (date of access).]

PLEASE ADHERE TO THE FOLLOWING GUIDELINES WHEN COMPILING YOUR REFERENCE:

- Information highlighted in colour is mandatory; if you do not know this information, you must indicate it with n.k. (for 'not known'). Information not highlighted in colour should be included where known (or relevant).
- Given Title refers to a title created by the user, in the case where a title does not already exist. Given titles should be in plain text, episode or track titles in 'single quotation marks', while the main title should be in italics.
- Type and format should be enclosed in square brackets. Where type is the same as format, e.g. a television or radio programme that was accessed in real time, only type should be given. To avoid confusion between the type of item and the format in which it can be accessed, see
- An extract is a particular sequence within a full-length item that is being referenced, e.g. a scene (or even a single frame) from a film or television programme. Start and end timings should be given for extracts. A clip is an incomplete audiovisual item. An example of a clip might be a YouTube video that is ten minutes long, and originally came from a longer film.
- For more than two production companies, countries of production or production credits, use 'et al.'
- All moving image material is assumed to be in colour and with sound, unless otherwise stated.

HOW TO REFERENCE

- Where several production credits are possible (e.g. contributor, performer, etc.), you should decide whom it is most appropriate to include, e.g. the most significant person involved in the creation of this item. For a feature film this is usually the director, but for a DVD commentary you should name the contributor, and for a DVD extra documentary the interviewee(s). See
- Transmission times follow the 24-hour model, e.g. 21.00.
- Transmission information (channel and date) is not applicable to non-broadcast material.
- Dates follow the European format, e.g. dd/mm/yyyy. If you know the month and year but not the specific day, the latter can be indicated with question marks, e.g. ??/mm/yyyy.
- Duration should be given in minutes (mins) and seconds (secs).
- Start and end times for extracts should be given in hours, minutes and seconds, e.g. hh:mm:ss-hh:mm:ss. If you wish to cite an individual frame, append the frame number to the time, in the form: hh:mm:ss:ff
- A catalogue number (as used for DVD, VHS and audio release material) is a unique identifier that can usually be found either on the spine of the sleeve or on the face of the disc or cassette; see the example provided. [Fig. 01]
- For online items, a webpage address must be given in full. Add a Digital Object Identifier (DOI) number or link, if available (see <http://www.doi.org/> for more information), as this will help uniquely identify the item, even if the URL becomes invalid.
- You should provide a date of access for online materials, but not for material accessed physically in an archive.
