Our Community Bond

Our Commonity Bond
Flat/Corridor/Block:
A community is a group of people living in the same place – but in halls of residence it can be so much more than that. It can be the best thing about where you live, a family away from home, and a crowd in which you find lifelong friends.
The key components of a positive hall community are respect, understanding, consideration and tolerance. As a group, you may wish to decide on a set of agreements which you can all sign up to. We do not want to dictate rules on who should use which washing up sponge and whether cutlery can be shared or not, but it may help for you – as a community – to decide on some self-governing rules by which you all choose to abide. Doing so at the beginning of your stay may just help to make sure nobody upsets or annoys anyone unintentionally.
