Disclaimer

This document was published in September 2024 and was correct at that time. The department* reserves the right to modify any statement if necessary, make variations to the content or methods of delivery of courses of study, to discontinue courses, or merge or combine courses if such actions are reasonably considered to be necessary by the University. Every effort will be made to keep disruption to a minimum, and to give as much notice as possible.

* Please note, the term 'department' is used to refer to 'departments', 'Centres and Schools'. Students on joint or combined degree courses should check both departmental handbooks.

1 Introduction to your department

1.1 Welcome

Welcome to Royal Holloway. Royal Holloway, University of London (hereafter 'the University') is one of the UK's leading research-intensive universities, with six academic schools spanning the arts and humanities, social sciences and sciences.

Whether you are joining us for the first time or returning for your second or third year, welcome (back) to the History Department at Royal Holloway, and to a new academic year. You are a member of a dynamic community of scholars and a department with an international reputation for its research and teaching and its commitment to public engagement.

The study of History ensures that the past remains alive, dynamic, controversial, and ever relevant. It is the study of justice and injustice, innovation and continuity, freedom and oppression, race and religion, ideas and ideologies, exploration and discovery, health and illness, sex and death, architecture and art, literature and music. History shows us how our own world came into being, but it also brings to life worlds that have long since disappeared and so stretches our imaginations about possibilities in the present and in the future. "The past is a foreign country", as L. P. Hartley wrote in The Go-Between (1953), "they do things differently there."

To be a historian is to be curious and imaginative: ready to question, to challenge and to learn. It is these qualities which we hope you will develop during your time at Royal Holloway. With hard work and commitment, you will graduate with a degree in a respected academic discipline and a repertoire of key skills in critical thinking, interpretation, and communication.

Revised and updated each year, this handbook provides all students with indispensable information about their degree programmes, courses, and assessments. It also provides an overview of the work of the History Department. It makes clear what is expected from you as a student and what you can reasonably expect from your tutors. It is your responsibility to read the following information carefully and make sure that you understand it.

Those of you who are first-year undergraduates are making the important transition from sixth form or access courses to university. As challenging as your studies to date have been, university degree level work is very different. You now need to be much more independent in how you study and how you approach reading lists, lectures, seminars and coursework deadlines. University education is about you finding out what you think. Your academic tutors are here to guide, encourage, advise and assess your efforts to understand the past. They will provide you with a context for the subjects you study; they will give expert guidance on what to read; they will identify the key issues to ponder and give you an account of what other historians have argued and the broader historiographical landscape; they will raise questions, point to further reading and suggest areas for further investigation. Academic tutors deliver feedback on your work, but feedback is NOT the same as you being told what the right answer is (there are no right answers!), and feedback only really works if you assimilate it and learn from it as you progress throughout your course. To get the most out of your relationship with your tutors, you will need to listen, engage, and ask questions.

It is essential that, with our help, you acquire and develop the skills of independent learning and historical enquiry during your first year at university and continue to develop and refine them in subsequent years. As second- and third-year students attest, you need to manage your own time well, use the various library resources effectively, plan coursework assignments carefully and in good time, write in a clear and comprehensible style, properly referencing your work, identify and meet deadlines, and work with others. This Student Handbook outlines the most essential of these new challenges and should remain a constant point of reference as you progress through your degree.

Your tutors, personal tutors and the administrative staff are all here to help. We are ready to support and inspire you to develop your skills as historians and expand your knowledge of the past. If you face difficulties, whether personal or work-related, it is important that you inform us, so that we can find the best way to help you. We expect hard work and commitment, but we also offer a supportive and respectful environment for everyone in the department.

It is essential that you maintain high standards throughout your undergraduate career, and to help you do so, we have clear ground rules to which you must all adhere:

- Attend all lectures, seminars and tutorials. This means not simply turning up, but coming prepared, having undertaken in advance the necessary reading and thinking. Remember you are active, not passive, learners; tutors are not there just to fill you up with historical content!
- Meet all deadlines for coursework – whether presentations, essays, commentaries, or group projects. These deadlines exist to enable you to engage effectively with the course materials and to pace yourselves over the courses of the three terms. Written work is essential for your development as a historian, so take pride in it.

- Respect your tutors and fellow students. Seminars depend on students' engagement and participation; your contributions to discussion benefit the whole class and are essential for degree-level study. If you have been set a class presentation, it is meant to benefit not just you but your co-students too. Your tutor will have designed a class around your contribution: failing to engage disrupts this process, so you are letting down everyone else as well as yourself.
- Make sure you check email regularly and respond appropriately. Tutors will communicate with you through your college email accounts so it is imperative to check this at least once every single day during the working week. Please also ensure you maintain a suitably respectful and professional tone in your emails.
- Obviously sometime things go awry; for very good reasons, you may be unable to attend a lecture, you might miss a class, or fail to meet a deadline. As long as you are honest and timely in reporting and explaining these exceptions, the department will aim to be understanding in its response.
- College and Departmental regulations are, however, very clear about attendance and delivery of work in all three years – and we endeavour to enforce these requirements robustly. If you fail to meet your commitments for any other than acceptable reasons you will be subject to the appropriate academic disciplinary procedure. The Student Handbooks (both Departmental and College) outline these regulations and procedures in detail for all undergraduates. Persistent defaulters - whether first, second or third years – will be issued with formal letters of warning and, if these are ignored, the College will move to have individual students' registrations terminated. If such a measure sounds draconian, it should be remembered that many students covet a place to study at Royal Holloway, and we wish to encourage everyone to make full use of the opportunity to study here.

If you follow these guidelines, whatever year of study you are in, you will have a good plan of action for a successful and productive year. Should you have questions, worries or concerns, please consult your personal tutors. I am sure you will enjoy your time in the History Department at Royal Holloway. This is a hugely exciting and important time in your life. Relish the chance to study history, and make every effort to succeed in your studies! We look forward to supporting you and celebrating all that you achieve.

Dr Robert Priest
Head of Department

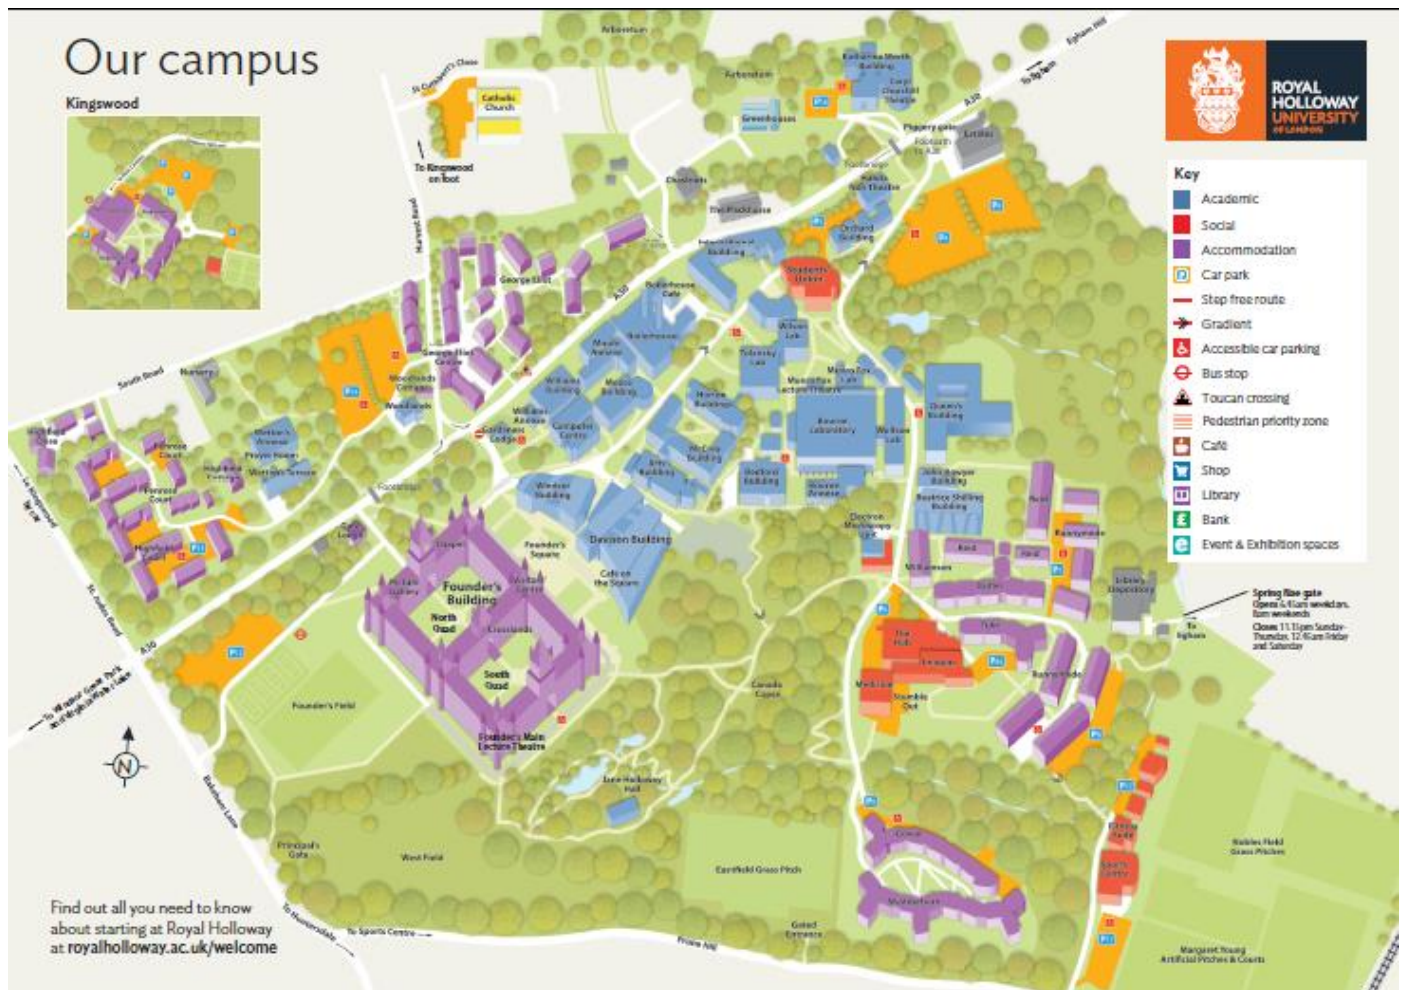

Top tips

- Be as organised as possible! Develop a routine; work out where and when you study best.
- Be realistic! A full-time degree requires in the region of 35 hours of work per week including lectures and tutorials as well as reading and preparation for class. Don't expect to succeed if you don't invest the time.
- Familiarise yourself with the library so that you are easily able to locate readings in hardcopy and online formats.
- Respect your fellow students and your tutors. Come to seminars well-prepared and ready to contribute to discussions.
- Write clearly and correctly – good writing skills help you to develop and convey your ideas effectively. If you think you might require some additional support, talk to your tutor.
- Learn to think for yourself! At degree level, history is about independent thought. You need to read around to gain an understanding of a historical topic and to be able to evaluate the arguments historians have developed in relation to it.
- Familiarise yourself with the various forms of assessment on your courses. Look at past papers to get a sense of what questions are asked and to focus your reading.
- Work hard, but set aside time for extra-curricular activities, socialising and relaxation.
- Focus on your own studies and work don't worry too much about what others say they are or are not doing.
- If you are struggling and need help, ask!

1.2 How to find us: the Department

The Department of History is located in the International Building. This can be found on the University campus map as building 15

1.3 Map of the Egham campus

Please note, student parking is very limited and is not available if you live in Halls or within 1.5 miles of campus. If you do live more than 1.5 miles away or have a particular reason why you need to come to campus by car, you must apply for a parking permit. If you have a motorbike or scooter you must also register the vehicle with University. Find more information about the Parking Permit portal here.

2 Support and advice

2.1 Support within your School

The School Helpdesk is there to help you with any questions or concerns you might have about your studies. It is situated in International Building, room IN149. Opening hours are 9:00am to 5:00pm. The Helpdesk is staffed throughout these opening hours. You can call in person during opening hours, ring 01784 276882 or email humanities-school@rhul.ac.uk. Depending on your query, the Helpdesk will answer your questions then and there, put you in touch with a colleague who can help, or find out the answer and get back to you. If you wish, you may also talk to them in private and they will make sure you receive the support you require.

The History Department offers students a range of different kinds of practical and personal support, including from your Personal Tutor, alongside College Wellbeing services, and the School of Humanities office staff. There are scheduled slots each term when you are expected to meet with your Personal Tutor, but you are also welcome to meet them during their Consultation and Feedback office hours and at other times by prior arrangement if/when the need arises. These will be held online for the foreseeable future.

3 Communication

3.1 Post

All post addressed to you in History department is delivered to the student pigeonholes (alphabetical by surname) in the International Building Foyer. At the end of each term student pigeonholes are cleared of accumulated mail which is then destroyed. Important information from Academic Services is often sent by internal post and tutors sometimes return work to you via the pigeonholes so you are advised to check them regularly.

3.2 Personal Tutors

Each student is assigned to a Personal Tutor.

You should expect to see your personal tutor at the beginning of each academic term and they are also available during their regular weekly 'Consultation and Feedback' hours during term time. Arrangements may also be made by them, or by you, to meet or speak with them at other times. Personal Tutors advertise on their office door the times when they are available to see students, which be offered as a mixture of in-person and 'virtual' consultation times over Microsoft Teams. Your Personal Tutor is keen to offer you advice and feedback about your work and to discuss your choice of courses with you. Personal Tutors are also willing to discuss personal difficulties, but they understand that you may prefer to take such matters to the College student counsellors or other Wellbeing services.

Occasionally – when, for example, a Personal Tutor goes on research leave – changes will be made, but we try to maintain a link between you and the same Personal Tutor throughout your time in the Department. Your Personal Tutor will probably be the person best equipped to write you references for jobs during your university career, and (along with the people teaching you in your Final Year) to act as a referee for jobs or higher degree programmes after graduation. It is, therefore, very much in your interest to make sure that you keep in regular contact with your Personal Tutor. But before you name your Personal Tutor as a referee on an application, you should always ask them if this is alright. You should also make sure that you give them ample time to complete any references: while you only have one Personal Tutor, each Personal Tutor has many – past and present – personal tutees.

You should regard your Personal Tutor as your first port of call in the Department, although it may be that on occasions they will direct you to another colleague, either in the Department or elsewhere, or to some other source of guidance or advice, such as the Student Administrative Centre, the Health Centre, the Student Counsellors, or Wellbeing.

Any help you get from any of these sources, or from anyone in the Department, is confidential if you prefer it that way. The Department reserves the right to inform appropriate bodies or persons if it considers that an individual is at significant risk, but you may assume that conversations with staff are confidential unless otherwise stated.

4 Teaching

4.1 Study weeks

Study Weeks in 2024-2025 are scheduled as follows:

Term One	Monday 3 – Friday 8 November 2024
Term Two	Monday 23 – Friday 28 February 2025

Study Weeks are weeks that do not normally have scheduled teaching (although they can also be used as a space to make up any teaching lost earlier in the term to staff illness). They are an opportunity for you to consolidate what you have learnt, work on your coursework assignments, and do preparatory reading for the second half of the term.

5 Degree structure

Full details about your degree course, including, amongst others, the aims, learning outcomes to be achieved on completion, modules which make up the course and any course-specific regulations are set out in the course specification available through the Course Specification Repository.

5.1 Department specific information about degree structure

The History Department provides a variety of degree programmes. The majority of our students are registered for the single honours BA History, while a sizeable number are registered for the BA Modern and Contemporary History. These are both three-year Single Honours degree programmes.

In addition, there are presently a further eight degree programmes in which this Department collaborates with other departments to provide Joint Honours degrees:

Ancient and Medieval History
English and History
French and History
German and History
History, Politics and International Relations
History and Music

History and Philosophy
History and Spanish

Please note that the degrees in History and a language – French and History, German and History, History and Spanish – normally take four years to complete and involve a year abroad.

The Department also participates in the Liberal Arts degree programme.

The Department also offers various ‘... with an International Year’ degree programmes, which include an additional year spent at a host university overseas between the second and third years of study at Royal Holloway. Students studying on History’s degree programmes are eligible to apply for the ‘... with an International Year’ variants during their second year of study, subject to academic performance and securing a placement at a host university. If accepted onto this programme, they are transferred formally to the ‘...with an International Year’ degree programme for the start of their overseas year.

Please note that there are certain requirements specific to each degree programme. However, it is usually possible for single honours students to take up to one module per year designed primarily for a degree programme other than the one for which you are registered. It is also possible in some cases to switch from one degree programme to another (or from full-time to part-time status). If you should wish to do either of these things you should talk firstly to your Personal Tutor. Any changes of degree then have to be signed off by the Department Education Lead, Dr Paris Chronakis.

5.2 Change of course

You may transfer to another degree programme subject to the following conditions being met before the point of transfer:

- (a) you must satisfy the normal conditions for admission to the new programme.
- (b) you must satisfy the requirements in respect of mandatory courses and progression specified for each stage of the new programme up to the proposed point of entry.
- (c) the transfer must be approved by both the department(s) responsible for teaching the new programme and that for which you are currently registered.
- (d) if you are a student with Tier 4 sponsorship a transfer may not be permitted by Tier 4 Immigration rules.
- (e) you may not attend a new programme of study until their transfer request has been approved.

Further information about changing programmes is available in Section 8 of the Undergraduate Regulations.

6 Facilities

6.1 The Library

The Library, which lies at the heart of a History student’s learning experience, is housed in the Emily Wilding Davison Building. Online electronic resources are also available via the Library’s website and via other library collections (e.g. Senate House). Details, including Library Search, dedicated subject guides and opening times can be found online on the Library home page.

The Ground Floor of the Library contains a High Use Collection which includes many of the books assigned for undergraduate modules. The rest of the Library collections are on the upper floors. There are plenty of study areas and bookable rooms to carry out group work, as well as many areas where you can work on your own. The Library contains a large number of PCs and has laptops to borrow on the ground floor to use in other study areas.

The Information Consultants for the School of Humanities are Emma Burnett and Victoria Falconer (humanitieslibrarians@rhul.ac.uk)

6.2 Photocopying and printing

The departmental printers and photocopier are reserved for staff use. Copier-printers (MFDs) for students are located in the Library, the Computer Centre and many PC labs, which will allow you to make copies in either black and white or colour. Further information is available here.

6.3 Computing

How to find an available PC

7 Assessment Information

7.1 Anonymous marking and cover sheets

All undergraduate essays and other forms of written coursework are marked anonymously. Please remember to make sure that your name does not appear on the written work that you submit. Work should be submitted by CANDIDATE NUMBER ONLY. Your candidate number (which changes every year) will be circulated to you early in Autumn Term.

7.2 Submission of work

Submission dates in the History Department for 2024-25 can be found on the relevant module Moodle pages. Please contact the office at humanities-school@rhul.ac.uk if you are not sure when a piece of work is due.

Please note that deadlines are potentially subject to change, and any changes to these deadlines will be relayed by the relevant course convener or the School Admin Team.

7.3 Penalties for over-length work

Word limits are not set to make students' lives unnecessarily difficult! They exist because of the importance of History students developing the necessary transferable skills to produce different kinds of writing and presentations under a range of circumstances and for various purposes. Word limits and presentation time limits, therefore, need to be taken seriously. Please note too that short-weight work is unlikely to be able to meet the assessment criteria in full.

In the School of Humanities we adopt the University-wide regulation to stop marking at the allocated maximum word-length or time limit. You will not receive marks for any further content beyond the limit set and in addition the failure to produce a fully structured set of content constructed within the parameters of the task will negatively affect the success of what is submitted (for example if a conclusion cannot be considered). Please adhere closely to the task parameters and assessment rubric set to avoid such potential negative effects on your assessment outcomes.

In addition to the text, the word count should include quotations and footnotes. Please note that the following are excluded from the word count: candidate number, title, course title, preliminary pages, headings and sub-headings, bibliography and appendices.

Work which is longer than the stipulated length in the assessment brief will be penalised in line with Section 13, paragraph (7) of the University's Academic Taught Regulations:

Section 13 (7)

Any work may not be marked beyond the upper limit set. The upper limit may be a word limit in the case of written work or a time limit in the case of assessments such as oral work, presentations, films or performance. In the case of presentations, films or performance these may be stopped once they exceed the upper time limit.

In addition to the text, the word count should include quotations and footnotes. Please note that the following are excluded from the word count: candidate number, title, course title, preliminary pages, bibliography and appendices.

7.4 What to do if things go wrong – Extensions to deadlines

Please refer to the Extensions Policy and guidance on the University's webpage about Applying for an Extension.

Please note: Not every assessment is eligible for an extension.

Listed below are the assessments for which extensions cannot be granted (i.e. are exempt)

All Open Book Exams in Term 3

HS1105 'Gods, Men and Power' end-of-module-assessment

HS1107 'Republics, Kings and People' end-of-module-assessment

HS1109 'Conflict and Identity in Modern Europe' end-of-module-assessment

HS1113 'Mao to Bin Laden' end-of-module-assessment

HS1116 'Rome to Renaissance' end-of-module-assessment

HS1117 'The World City: A History of London' end-of-module-assessment

7.5 Support and exam access arrangements for students requiring support

Some students at the University may have a physical or mental impairment, chronic medical condition or a Specific Learning Difficulty (SpLD) which would count as a disability as defined by the Equality Act (2010) that is, "a physical or mental impairment which has a long-term and substantial effect on your ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities". It is for such conditions and SpLDs that Disability and Dyslexia Services (DDS) can put in place adjustments, support and exam access arrangements. Please note that a "long-term" impairment is one that has lasted or is likely to last for 12 months or more.

If you have a disability or SpLD you must register with the Disability and Dyslexia Services Office for an assessment of your needs before adjustments, support and exam access arrangements (') can be put in place. There is a process to apply for special arrangements for your examinations – these are not automatically put in place. Disability and Dyslexia Services can discuss this process with you when you register with them. Please see section 2 above for further guidance about registering with the Disability and Dyslexia Services Office.

Please note that if reasonable adjustments, including exam access arrangements, have been put in place for you during the academic year, the Sub-board will not make further allowance in relation to your disability or SpLD.

7.6 Academic misconduct - Plagiarism

The History Department requires its students to use the MHRA (Modern Humanities Research Association) system of referencing their written work.

Proper use of referencing protects you from allegations of plagiarism, by allowing the reader to understand precisely which ideas are yours and which are those of your sources. When you write essays or dissertations, therefore, it is essential that you indicate the precise source of information and ideas that are not your own. You should always give as much information as possible in your footnote, using precise page numbers. This will enable you to find any information again, if necessary. By referencing in this way, you are also allowing the reader to understand the breadth and depth of your reading, and where to find a source if they wish to consult it too. The Department takes plagiarism extremely seriously, and will thoroughly investigate allegations of plagiarism and poor academic practice.

The Health and Safety webpage provides general information about our health and safety policies.

9.1 Code of practice on harassment for students

The University is committed to upholding the dignity of the individual and recognises that harassment can be a source of great stress to an individual. Personal harassment can seriously harm working, learning and social conditions and will be regarded and treated seriously. This could include grounds for disciplinary action, and possibly the termination of registration as a student.

The University's Code of Practice on personal harassment for students should be read in conjunction with the Student Disciplinary regulations and the Complaints procedure.

9.2 Lone working policy and procedures

The University has a 'Lone Working Policy and Procedure' that can be found here.

Lone working is defined as working during either normal working hours at an isolated location within the normal workplace or when working outside of normal hours.

Any health and safety concerns should be brought to the attention of the Departmental Health and Safety Coordinator or the University Health and Safety Office.

It is likely that most activities will take place on University premises. However, the principles contained in the above section will apply to students undertaking duties off campus.
